- Jane: It's a gorgeous day, Elena. Do you have any plans?
Elena: I'm going to do some shopping.
Jane: Of course, you are! You always go shopping on Saturdays.
Elena: Yes, but today I'm going to buy something special to wear for my brother's wedding.
Jane: He's not getting married until August. Why are you going today?
Elena: I hate last-minute shopping. I always seem to buy something I don't like.
Jane: Well, a lot of the stores have sales on now—I love buying stuff on sale.
Elena: It's my brother's wedding, so I'm not going to buy a cheap dress. I like the color pink, so I might get a pink one.
Jane: Pink? I don't think that will look very good. You look very nice in green.
Elena: Green? Not for a wedding!
Jane: Why not? I prefer green to any other color!
Elena: Well, you get a green dress then. What about white? I love white.
Jane: You can't wear white to a wedding! Only the bride can wear white.
Elena: Oh, right. And I can't wear black either, can I?
Jane: Of course not! Listen, you need me—I'm going to come with you. What time are you going?

Read the email. Then decide whether each statement is a (True) or b (False).

Hi Adrian,
I thought I'd send you a quick email now because I won't have a lot of free time until after the conference. Also, there's a problem with the internet access here in the hotel. There's Wi-Fi in some places but I don't think I have it in my room. Anyway, I'm online now, so I hope I can send this before we lose the connection.

My flight was good and there were no problems. It was a bit boring, but I never really enjoy traveling anyway. When I arrived in Singapore, it was very hot and I went straight to the hotel.

If you want to call me, I'll text you the number of the direct line to my room, but remember we're about eight hours ahead here.

The conference should be interesting. They sent us a lot of information about all the talks that people are giving. I started reading it on the plane but then a good movie came on—it was the new one with Colin Firth and you know what a good actor I think he is.

Sorry, but I have to go now. I've just had a text telling me they're waiting for me downstairs for lunch.

Hope all is well at home.

Lucy

Last week my husband George had an important job interview. He already has a job as a sales manager in a large international company, but the new job is better-paid, more interesting, and has longer working hours. The job is Head of Research and Development, and it's exciting because he has to design and make new products, and then test and develop them. It sounds wonderful, but there is a small problem. We live in New York now, but the new job is in Mexico City.

I love living in New York. We have a fantastic social life: we often go out to the movie theater, restaurants, and art galleries, and of course most of our friends are here, too. My job is here. I work in a busy travel agency and I love it.

Yesterday, George came home from work and told me he got the job. He's taking the job and we are moving to Mexico! The salary for the new job is so good that I don't have to work right away. I can take my time studying Spanish at a local college until I feel ready to work. Flights to and from New York are not very expensive and our friends can come and visit us. We are moving next month and now I'm as excited as George is.

I'd like to talk to you about our new product range: Out of this World.

It is a new range of beauty products that uses materials from our sister planet, Erathe. I'm sure you've heard a lot about it. For example, the air and water there are twenty times cleaner and fresher than here on Earth. I have been lucky enough to go there myself and I can tell you that it is amazing.

The seas and rivers are all green, not blue like ours. The sand on the beaches is pink and the grass is purple and blue.

I have brought some of the products with me for you to try. As you are all going to sell the whole range, it's important for you to feel, smell, and yes, even taste them. Once you try these creams and treatments, you will want not just to sell them, but also to buy and use them at home. You will benefit from our secret recipes.

Yes, they are secret and they will stay that way. As a result, the range is more expensive than others. Because of this, you must let your customers try the products before you talk about the cost. That way, they will want what you are offering them.
